The 10 Commandments, Parent-Style

Dear Parents,

After the long, icy snow days of winter it is certainly wonderful to appreciate the beautiful spring weather. Spring and the Easter season remind us of the importance of growth and renewal in our lives. As parents and educators, we are all called to work together on behalf of the children to help them grow into responsible, respectful, service-oriented, practicing Catholics. However, in a busy, media-crazed world where children are exposed to a multitude of negative images, behaviors and peer pressures, many parents are in search of supportive guidelines or that famous parenting manual that was never published!

The good news for Catholic parents is that they already have the guidelines at their fingertips. In a recent article on Catholic Online the Ten Commandments are offered as a useful reference and foundation for parenting. I would like to share this article with you as an opportunity for all of us to grow in our abilities to be the role models and guiding forces that our young people need to grow up in today's world.

Reflection questions relating to the Ten Commandments

1. "I am the Lord thy God; thou shalt not have strange gods before me."

Question for parents: Do I honestly have faith in God, and place him at the center of my life?

Lesson for kids: Through words and actions children can see what living a life looks like based on the teachings of the Catholic Church, and can learn how to then teach their own children. Children will also be able to feel the strength of their parents' faith.

Or:

Question for parents: Are my priorities material things, alcohol, work or causes not related to God?

Lesson for kids: Don't place God first, instead strive to drive fancy sports cars, always win the game, and wear the trendiest clothes.

2. "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain."

Question for parents: Do I choose not to take the Lord's name in vain and not use offensive language?

Lesson for kids: Taking the Lord's name in vain, swearing and offensive language are not spoken in the home and are not acceptable behaviors.

Or:

Question for parents: Do I use the Lord's name in vain for drama and use offensive language because other people use it in conversation and in the media?

Lesson for kids: It is acceptable to use the Lord's name in vain, as well as other offensive language.

3. "Remember thou keep holy the Lord's day."

Question for parents: Do I attend church on the weekend, spend time in positive activities, take a rest and not obsess or work extra hours (not scheduled)?

Lesson for kids: Go to Mass once a week and make Sunday an extra special day by sharing the time and activities with family and friends.

Or:

Question for parents: Do I miss Mass, work extra hours and not have a chance to share time with family or enjoy God's gifts, such as nature, family dinner, music or reading?

Lesson for kids: It is not necessary to go to Mass regularly or spend time with family on weekends, and it is acceptable to make personal activities a priority on days off rather than spend time with the family.

4. "Honor thy father and thy mother."

Question for parents: Do I speak of and to my parents with respect, spend time with them and offer them help?

Lesson for kids: If they see your parents shown love and respect, they will learn how to do the same for you, and other people as well.

Or:

Question for parents: Do I avoid speaking with them or visiting them, or say unkind things about them?

Lesson for kids: If children see that their own parents do not show respect, honesty and healthy communication patterns toward their parents, they will probably use the same negatives behaviors toward you and their grandparents.

5. "Thou shalt not kill?"

Question for parents: Do I keep this commandment and also not allow one's self and children to watch murder related television shows or play violent video games that promote players to "kill" images on the screen?

Lesson for children: The influence of watching violent behavior is negative, and though a popular pastime in our culture, can and should be avoided.

Or:

Questions for parents: Have I killed or contemplated taking the life of another? Do I spend free time watching violent television shows about murder, and/or allow my children to watch violent television and/or play video games encouraging players to "kill" the screen images? In a much milder connotation, have I purposely killed another person's dream, enthusiasm, curiosity or idea?

Lesson for kids: Watching violence on the television is acceptable and playing and/or acting out "killing" people figures on a video game is acceptable.

6. "Thou shalt not commit adultery."

Question for parents: Do I stay faithful to my spouse in body and mind? Do I tell jokes or laugh at jokes that demean the institute of marriage?

Lesson for kids: If a marriage is filled with respect and commitment, they will see what that looks like and how it is done. More importantly, if parents keep this commandment, their children and spouses will never experience the conflict and pain that being unfaithful can create.

Or:

Question for parents: Have I been unfaithful in body, and/or chosen to use pornography or otherwise participated in virtual or real online relationships outside of marriage?

Lessons for kids: In marriage, it is acceptable to be unfaithful to one's spouse and choose to spend time in affairs of the body and/or mind.

7. "Thou shalt not steal."

Question for parents: Do I refrain from choosing to steal or from cheating in financial transactions?

The O'Reilly Minute

Lesson for kids: Honesty is the best policy and stealing is wrong.

Or:

Question for parents: Do I steal clothes from stores or office supplies from work, cheat on taxes and/or steal ideas from co-workers and take credit for their work?

Lesson for kids: Stealing is only wrong if I get caught.

8. "Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor."

Question for parents: Am I honest in dealings and communications with my family, community members, parish and co-workers?

Lesson for kids: If parents speak the truth with others, and about others, children will see how honesty and respect are practiced. This can be reinforced as they develop relationships with family and friends.

Or:

Question for parents: Do I speak untruths or spread gossip about people?

Lesson for kids: It is acceptable to lie and gossip.

9. "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife/husband."

Question for parents: Do I think of my spouse as my one and only lover and accept all aspects of my spouse?

Lesson for kids: Married couples show total commitment to each other and accept each other.

Or:

Question for parents: Do I desire a neighbor/co-worker/other person instead of my spouse or wish my spouse was more like other people?

Lesson for kids: It is acceptable to place one's desire for love outside of marriage and want your beloved to be at the center of your life until someone better comes along.

10. "Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's goods."

Question for parents: Am I grateful for the life I have, the family I have, the home I have, and the faith I have?

Lesson for kids: On any given day, look for something in your life to be grateful for. Always be grateful for what you have.

Or:

Question for parents: Do I want a bigger house, faster car, a greener lawn or more prestigious job?

Lesson for kids: Appearances are very important, so always try to keep up with the Joneses. Being jealous and envious of others is acceptable.

Underlying all actions as parents is one other bonus guideline: Do unto others, as you would have done unto you.

The Ten Commandments can be used by parents as a way of life, and as a reference to teach their children life lessons. Words about people and actions toward their children, spouses and other people are what truly become the raw material of what children use as their own real-life videos that teach them how to behave and grow toward adulthood.

Happy Spring!

Message From Monsignor

Dear Parents,

With the celebration of Easter the Church enters into a time of 50 days of celebration of the Resurrection of the Lord. The Feast of the Ascension comes on May 13th of this celebration and this is followed by the great Feast of Pentecost on May 23rd.

These feasts are at the heart of the Church's life and worship. We here at Saint Brigid will celebrate them with our school children as well as with our parish. The Easter Season is an appropriate way to close out the school year as it reminds us of who we are in Christ and how we are to live as his disciples.

The celebration of the Sacrament of Confirmation for our 8th graders as well as the celebration of First Communion for our 2nd graders helps us to see clearly why we spend so much energy and time in making sure that our children know well the faith and our parish commitment to teach it clearly and without reservation.

Each year as I reflect on Saint Brigid School, I am grateful for all the wonderful ways in which we help our children grow into responsible adults. I am grateful for the ways in which we give them the tools to think critically and the gift of the Faith they receive to function in a complex world. I am grateful also of the many sacrifices that parents and teachers and staff make each day to make this a reality.

Springtime, Eastertide and the coming summer is a time to refresh, regroup and delight in the presence of the Lord and the many gifts He bestows on us each day.

Sincerely,

Msgr. Joseph Hendricks

Family Forgiveness

Perhaps the most important function of the family is to serve as a school in forgiveness—in bestowing mercy and, even more important, in learning how to seek it, receive it, and accept it. Forgiveness is at the very heart of walking the spiritual path. Forgiveness is essential if we are to cut through the illusions we create about ourselves. We all want to be the hero of our own story. It's very human to want to avoid guilt and assume a sort of distance between us and the God who yearns to be close to us. We need to reverse the process; stop polishing the image and start revealing the true self – warts and all. It is only the true self that can know the full force of God's love, and that love often arrives awash in mercy and forgiveness.

Caring for God's Creation

7th Pillar of Catholic Social Teaching

All of creation is a gift from God. The way we treat the environment serves as a sign of our respect for the Creator. We exhibit our respect for Him by our meticulous care for the earth which He entrusted to us. Man was given dominion over all creation as 'sustainer' rather than 'exploiter'.. The world's goods are available for humanity to use only under a "social mortgage" which comes with great responsibility. (Catholic Charities, Diocese of Austin)

Excessive consumerism and poor environmental practices lead to destructive patterns that exploit the earth. We should strive to live simply, to meet the needs of the present while preserving all of creation for future generations. It is a requirement of our faith to protect our planet and all that exists here. (Diocesan Social Action, Cleveland, Ohio)

We respect creation when we treat animals humanely, when we use the earth's resources wisely, when we reuse instead of throw out, when we refrain from polluting, when we work to clean up pollution and when we find ways to live in harmony with nature. (Missionaries of the Sacred Heart, Aurora, Illinois) It is up to us as parents to ensure these values continue in the future. We have such a huge influence on the moral ideals of our children. The simplest suggestions by us, and our own demonstration of this care and respect, will ensure future generations will respect the earth and all that dwell within.

Mrs. Lombardo Named to Board Post

Vice Principal Cindy Lombardo has been selected to serve on the Ohio State Board of Education's Educator Standards Board. In this position, Mrs. Lombardo will be representing all non-public teachers in the State of Ohio.

"We are grateful for Mrs. Lombardo's willingness to serve as well as for her expertise in standards and licensure," said Monsignor Joseph Hendricks. "We know that Mrs. Lombardo will be an active member of the Committee and a real asset for children and teachers in non-public schools."

The Governor's Commission on Teaching Success recommended that to reach a higher level of performance, standards needed to be set for teachers and principals, resulting in the creation of the Educator Standards Board. The board consists of ten teachers from public schools, one teacher from a chartered nonpublic school, five school administrators, one school board member, and one parent representative and three representatives from higher education.

The nominations for the Educator Standards Board came from teachers' Unions, Higher Education, and educational associations that represent teachers, administrators, parents and school board members. Membership on the board is voluntary.

The purpose of the board is to create a link between academic content standards for students to the standards for teachers and principals, with the educator standards taking in to account cultural competency, mental health issues, closing achievement gaps, as well as the education of gifted students.

"Mrs. Lombardo's appointment to the board is due to her reputation in the education community for upholding high standards for teachers and students," said Principal Kathleen O'Reilly. With Mrs. Lombardo serving on this board it will allow our own school community to benefit from her first hand knowledge regarding the wisdom of the State Board. In particular, the topics regarding high standards for professional development for our teachers and best practice standards for quality classroom instruction resulting in high performing students graduating from Saint Brigid of Kildare School will be most beneficial."

Saint Brigid Community Suits Señorita Schimek

Carmen Schimek is a young teacher with a love of community. That love of community has carried her from her family in Blue Earth, Minn., to involvement in St. Paul's Outreach as a college student and now to our own community here at Saint Brigid of Kildare.

Señorita Schimek will make a quick transition from Spanish teacher to bride when school is out in June. She and fiancé Andrew Kebe will tie the knot in St. Paul, Minn., where they met when Señorita Schimek was a student at the University of St. Thomas.

The fact that two young people are getting married is certainly not unique, but how they met and plan to move forward definitely is.

Both were involved in St. Paul's Outreach, an evangelistic Catholic campus ministry which began at the University of St. Thomas in 1985.

"I was a normal college student with normal experiences as far as the world would say," said Señorita Schimek. "Then I met some people involved with St. Paul's Outreach and went on a retreat which was life-changing. I experienced the holy spirit working. That led to me getting further involved in St. Paul's Outreach."

One of the purposes of St. Paul's Outreach (SPO) is to present the Gospel to young people and train them to live as followers of Christ within the Catholic Church.

Señorita Schimek eventually led an SPO women's household at the University of St. Thomas. An SPO household is a place where students live, immersed in a Christian environment in which they pray, eat meals, do chores and service together.

"By living in this environment we were able to hold each other accountable and to help each other grow as individuals," said Señorita Schimek. "St. Paul's Outreach is hoping to create a counter-cultural lifestyle. We're trying to live a radically different lifestyle than the rest of the world around us. How do I learn to trust in the Lord when the world says something different? It is living in the world but not of the world.

"College is a time when people make decisions about who they will be, so it's where they start their adult life," she said. "I was totally blessed by finding St. Paul's Outreach which is why I'm still involved."

Mr. Kebe, a Columbus native and St. Charles graduate, was the men's leader in St. Paul while Señorita Schimek was the women's leader. Now they lead meetings with Ohio State and Ohio Dominican students. Mr. Kebe brought SPO to Columbus in 2004 then went to St. Paul for three years of training.

"His life's work will be as a missionary for St. Paul's Outreach," said Señorita Schimek. "I still lead a formation program that teaches the values and discipleship of SPO. I've been through the decision-making process and can talk to some-

"Young people, the church asks you to go, in the power of the Holy Spirit, to those who are near and those who are far away. Share with them the freedom you have found in Christ."

one trying to make the decision to move forward."

While living a counter-cultural lifestyle, Señorita Schimek, who double-majored in Elementary Education and Spanish, accepted the challenge of teaching not only the Spanish language but also Hispanic culture to the students of Saint Brigid.

She came to the job with practical experience, courtesy of St. Paul's Outreach. Some of her housemates over the years have been native Spanish speakers.

"There was one woman learning English, and I was learning Spanish so she spoke English to me, and I spoke Spanish to her! We ate a lot of great food and learned a lot about the life of Latinos. I had an authentic experience of Latino family celebrations beyond a textbook, meeting their families and experiencing day-to-day life. In fact, I was just in Miami for a wedding not too long ago."

Señorita Schimek grew up in Blue Earth, Minn., which is the home of the Jolly Green Giant ... literally. The town has a 55-foot statue and celebrates his birthday each year. The Green Giant company has a canning factory in town.

"During college I spent my summers working with the children of migrant workers, and I learned a lot about the way they lived," said Señorita Schimek. "Family is very important."

This has helped as she incorporates Hispanic culture into the Spanish curriculum.

"I read a lot of stories and incorporate Spanish words to help the students build on the vocabulary they have learned. My focus is on communication tools for how to use the vocabulary and phrases they have learned," she said.

She included a service component for the 7th graders this year; collecting school supplies for those in need.

As her first year at Saint Brigid comes to a close, one of the things Señorita Schimek has appreciated most about working here has been the community.

"I love being able to work with the whole family," she said. "I love the feeling of community, getting to see the parent involvement and have the opportunity to teach siblings."

Spanish Students Write Books

Saint Brigid of Kildare 7th and 8th graders have been very busy in Spanish. Each student created a book written and illustrated entirely in Spanish. The books have been "published" (bound and barcoded) and will be available for all students to check out of the library beginning in the middle of April. The middle school students should be proud of their work!

Saint Brigid finished 2nd out of 13 schools at the Diocesan Battle of the Books last week at Immaculate Conception School. The Wolfhounds came in 2nd by only 3 points out of 178 points in the final round. Teams answered questions about more than 100 books they read during the school year in preparation for the competition.

Saint Brigid's team: Sam Curry, Alex Dolbin, Bryan Hare, Brooke Long, Michael Marrocco, Leah Peacock, Allie Springer.

"I am so proud of our students for choosing to join a reading club through the ALSO program and work all year to read books well enough that they could answer so many difficult questions about those books," said 5th and 6th grade literacy teacher Jill Ceccutti.

"Even better than a second place finish is the manner in which our students represented our school with respect, enthusiasm, and poise," said Librarian Deb Mosko. "We are so proud of them!"

It's Never Too Late For Annual Fund

Welcome back! Even though Easter is over, there are still eight weeks of school left and many exciting things happening during this time, such as the Middle School Scholarship Program. In its third year, this program awards two $500 scholarships to 7th grade students regardless of financial or academic merit. The scholarship is a great use of money raised through the Annual Fund, as every 7th grader is eligible.

As a reminder, eight weeks is plenty of time to make a donation to the Annual Fund for the current school year. Donations are collected until the end of the school year, and we are only at 68% of our goal. The Annual Fund does not stress a dollar goal; rather we would like to see participation from 100% of our school families. Remember, no gift is too small. Please help us conclude the 2009-2010 Annual Fund drive by making your donation today. Your donation is 100% tax deductible. Please contact Sarah Moore at sarahmoore00@hotmail.com or (614) 761-3734
